A COPY OF INSCRIPTIONS ON GRAVESTONES IN THE TWO OLD CEMETERIES

ON THE EAST HILL IN PETERBOROUGH, NEW HAMPSHIRE.

This publication is issued with a desire to preserve, in a convenient and permanent form of print, a copy of the inscriptions on the gravestones in the old cemetery—the records on which, in many instances, can be found in no other place. The first burials were in the smaller cemetery, which is a little walled enclosure of about one hundred feet square, situate two hundred and fifty-two feet westerly from the second and much larger cemetery. In this small cemetery there are but five gravestones. In both cemeteries there are many mounds with rough stones at either end indicating graves that must ever remain unknown. The larger cemetery is two hundred and seven feet on the Street Road, and two hundred and ninety-five feet on its south line (see plan). The spelling, punctuations, capitalization and use of f for s on some of the oldest gravestones, have been faithfully copied.

The subject of copying these inscriptions was first suggested at a meeting of the Peterborough Historical Society, and, as a result, the matter was brought before the annual town meeting of March, 1908, and the following motion passed: "That a survey and plan of the two old cemeteries on the hill be prepared, that a copy of the inscriptions on all the gravestones be made and printed for permanent preservation and free distribution under the direction of a committee of three to be appointed by the moderator, and that a sum not exceeding two hundred dollars be raised and appropriated for the same." Under this motion James F. Brennan, Eben W. Jones and William Moore were selected as a committee.

"A few burials were made in a little graveyard on the meeting-house hill. This was probably laid out just after the first meeting-house was built, in 1752. It seemed the intention of the early settlers to have the graveyard just behind the church, and a few burials were made here. William Stewart, the first person who died in town, March 15, 1753, aged fifty-three years, was buried here, and then five other burials (which have stones) took place, and a few mounds and headstones indicate a few graves beside. But the ground was found so full of rocks, and so hard, that it was impossible to dig graves, and this site was abandoned and a new location sought. A spot was selected near, situated on the side of the hill, east of the meeting-house, of about one and a half acres, and walled in for this purpose, which is now known as the Old Cemetery. With our modern views of cemeteries, it had an exceedingly bad location; it was on ground, the most of it, wholly unsuitable for the purpose of burial; there was no order in the arrangement of the graves in the yard, only that the head was laid to the west. It was also too circumscribed, as though in this wide country, and where land was so cheap, a sufficient room could not be afforded for the final resting place of our bodies without impinging on one another. The north side only of this yard was found suitable for graves, embracing but little more than a half of the yard, while the remainder of it, in consequence of its rocks and ledges, was never occupied. So hardly an acre of ground constituted the burial place of this town for more than eighty years, or through more than two generations. How such numbers were buried on such a small tract of land, and yet always room for more, is a mystery to us. Gravestones were not very common, in proportion to the number of deaths, and the graves soon became obliterated and gave space for new burials. In these times, very little attention was ever bestowed on cemeteries; they were sadly neglected, allowed to grow up with bushes and briars, to be overrun with cattle, and to become one of the most unsightly places in town. To narrow the precincts of man at death, when he requires so little space at the best, was a petty economy, a thoughtless act that should never have been tolerated.

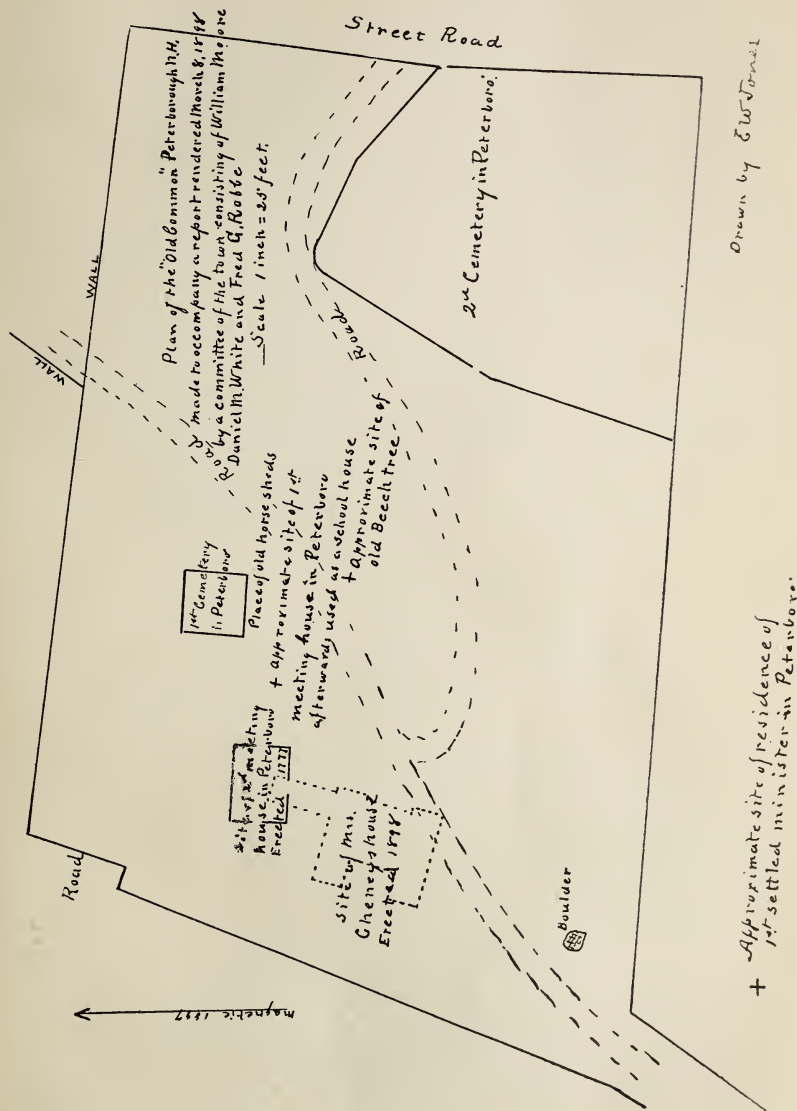

The early inscription on the stones began with the real matter of fact, 'Here lies the body of ———'; the next step was, 'Sacred to the memory of ———'; and later to the plain 'Memory of ———'; but subsequently with the plain 'Mr. ———', with the date of death and the age, and perhaps with some scrap of poetry or a Scripture quotation on the bottom of the stone. The early gravestones very scrupulously noticed all the titles of the individual, and if he had none he was sure to have the plain Mr. applied to his name on his gravestone.

In proportion to the large number of burials, very few gravestones were erected, and all of these were of slate. Many families were very culpable in this respect. No doubt it was attended with a great trouble and expense in these times, and then to be served with an ordinary article at the best. But some of these stones show the durability of slate, even compared with the modern marble. They stand yet—a good, fair record—after more than a hundred years of exposure to the elements.

The first burial in this yard was Samuel, son of Capt. Thomas and Mary Morrison, died Dec. 22, 1754, aged one year; and then burials occurred in 1757, '58, '60, '62, '64, and '66, and so on till 1834, when most of the burials ceased, upon the establishment of a new yard. As for ornamentation of the early cemeteries, it was never dreamed of; all agreed to let the graveyard be the most neglected of all places; but little effusions of fancy and sometimes grim humor would eke out on the gravestones, in the grotesque figures of death and death's head, sometimes an angel with a trumpet, and the memorable inscriptions of 'Moriendum est omnibus' and the 'Memento mori' so common in these times. Little scraps of indifferent poetry were often applied to individuals, as much out of place as could be well imagined; for instance, a rough, quarrelsome, and perhaps intemperate person, is lauded with all the choicest and mildest of the Christian graces, the quotation being as devoid as of propriety of application.'

At the annual town meeting of March, 1897, a committee was selected to mark the site of the old meeting house. Their report—submitted at the next annual meeting—may be found in the town records and in the Transcript of March 17, 1898; a copy of the plan of survey, accompanying that report, is here given—believing it would be useful in connection with a description of the old cemetery—showing the site of the First Frame Meeting House built in 1777, abandoned in 1825, sold by the town to William Scott in 1829 for $75.25; the probable site of the First Log Meeting House built in 1752, used in 1796 as a school house; the location of Horse Sheds; the probable site of the Beech Tree under which the people gathered at noon, between Sabbath services, to discuss the events of the day; the location of the roads across the common; the large rock near the southwest corner; the minister's house south of the south wall of the common on land owned in 1895 by George E. Hunt and west of where Mrs. (Cheney) Schofield's new road enters the common. In the north-west corner is shown the head of the old road—long since abandoned and of which only the south wall now remains. The town records of 1784 show the plan of the ground floor of the 1777 meeting house, giving size and shape of pews, aisles, pulpit, and names of owners, showing the house to have been 60 by 45 feet. On June 21, 1834, the town voted "to discontinue the road across the old common from the Street road to south line of common, and that the selectmen sell the common at auction." The registry of deeds (Vol. 179, page 332) records a deed, dated July 4, 1834, from the selectmen to John Farnum, for $81, of land "known by name of Old Meeting House Common, bounded east by highway and old graveyard, north by Dunbar, Ames and Smith, west by Ames, Smith and said Farnum, south by said Farnum and the graveyard." The grantee and his heirs and assigns were to put up and forever maintain a wall around the small graveyard and keep up the wall between the common and graveyard adjoining.

PLAN OF OLD BURIAL GROUND

PETERBOROUGH, N. N.

This plan of the larger old cemetery is prepared to aid in the location of grave-stones. Because of rocks and ledges in the soil, most of the graves were placed in the north and west part of the cemetery, hence it was thought best to use the north line of posts to measure from in the location of graves. At the points indicated by letters of the alphabet on the plan, are set fifty-four substantial granite posts with four inch square tops, on which are cut letters as above shown. The graves are placed very irregularly, little or no attempt at uniformity of rows of lots were maintained, and in order to establish some plan for the location of these graves imaginary lines were run north and south, as indicated on plan, wherever an unobstructed space through the gravestones could be found, and measurements from the north posts southerly to the front of each gravestone was made, and from this imaginary line east to the face of the gravestone. Under this arrangement will be found a letter and figure at the left of each of the following printed record of inscriptions to indicate its location; for instance, A 57 indicates that the grave is south fifty-seven feet from the north post marked A, on an imaginary line to the south post with a similar initial; the figure at the right of the record of inscription indicates that it is that number of feet east from this imaginary line to the face of the gravestone. Where the lines on the west side are so close together, much difficulty was experienced in finding an unobstructed space between the many and irregularly placed gravestones to run a line.

Who sought no honour & betrayed no trust
This truth he prov'd in every path he trod
An honest man's the noblest work of God
Christian sincere! thou generous, feeling friend
Here with the ills of life, thy sorrows end!
True worth, like thine, sustains no rude decay
Tho' time should sweep these sculptur'd lines

While weeping friends bend o'er thy silent tomb
Recount thy virtues and their loss deplore;
Faith's piercing eye darts through the dreary
And hails the blest, where tears shall flow no

Esther Duncan dau
of Mr. George & Mrs.
Betsy Duncan died
21 Feb. 1809; aged
2 years & 10 months.

Alas how swift our transient comforts fly
And all our pleasures only bloom to die
A sweet smiling babe a spotless flower
Cut down & withered in an hour.

Z 102 Slate.

In memory of
Jenny F. Duncan
dau. of Mr. George Duncan J^r
& Mrs. Jenny, his wife, who died
9th Sept. 1801. Aged 16 months
& 12 days.

See the dear youth just enter life;
Bud forth like flowers in May;
Stay long enough to steal our hearts,
Then smile & die away.

Z 105 Slate.

In memory of
Martha Duncan, dau. of
Mr. George Duncan J^r &
Mrs. Jenny his wife who died 31 May 1801. Aged
1 year 7 months &
24 days.

So fades the lovely blooming flower,
Sweet smiling solace of an hour;
So soon our transient comforts fly,
And nature only blooms to die.

Z 108 Slate.

In memory of
Mrs. JENNY DUNCAN, wife of
Mr. George Duncan J^r.
who died June 16th 1802.
in the 29th year of her age.

Great God, I own thy sentence just,
And nature muft decay;
I yield my body to the duft,
To dwell with fellow clay.

The large cemetery has 468 gravestones and monuments, recording the deaths of 539 persons; the small cemetery has 5 gravestones, recording the deaths of 6 persons.

The date of the Youngman inscription, in column 37, should read 1817, instead of 1317, as printed.
